Therefore, you can hire an expert essay writer free to help you with your essay. But, if you'd prefer to do it yourself, here are some useful tricks to help you in writing strong topic sentences.

Write the thesis statement first

A thesis statement leads your research process for the essay. You should come up with a workable thesis statement for your essay before writing the main body. The body paragraphs must be connected to the thesis statement. Therefore, a thesis statement helps to avoid distractions when it comes to write my essay in 1 hour and focusing and structuring your topic development. It will assist you in formulating perfect topic sentences that follow the thesis statement. Writing your thesis statement first will help in outlining and following a logical order in your essay. It will also help you in organizing your essay according to the demands of your thesis statement.

Follow a sequence in connection to the thesis statement

Your thesis statement will help you in writing strong topic sentences. Thus, your topic sentences must be a reflection of the thesis statement. For example, let's suppose your thesis statement mentions the creation of social issues due to the essay writer website. So, the topic sentences must also be focused on the social aspect of drug addiction, rather than health issues caused due to drug addiction.

One idea per paragraph

Every topic sentence must cover a different aspect of the same focus. In this way, every paragraph will state one idea per paragraph. It should not be covering two different aspects of the thesis statement. Let's take the previously-mentioned example of the creation of social issues due to drug addiction. For instance, if one topic sentence is covering the social isolation aspect, the next topic sentence should be focused on social behavior. This practice will help you in writing strong topic sentences.

Clear indication towards the content of the paragraph

A topic sentence should indicate what to expect in the latter part of the paragraph. Your topic sentence should not be confusing. Your topic sentence and the content of the paragraph should not be mismatched. For instance, if a topic sentence is mentioning the economic issues of a country, then your paragraph content must also be focused on supporting the topic sentence.

A topic sentence should be arguable

Your topic sentence must be debatable. It should not be stating some facts or universal truths. For instance, this is not a strong topic sentence:

"Daily water consumption should be increased because drinking more water can help in solving many health issues".

A strong topic sentence reflects the writer's stance on a particular topic. It should be focused on finding new information on a particular topic.

Follow the TEAR structure

Your essay should be based on the TEAR structure for the paragraphs. The first line should be an arguable topic sentence. The next lines should be aimed at providing evidence to support write my essay for me. The next lines should be the analysis of the evidence provided. While the last lines should re-define the topic sentences. Thus, it can be concluded that a strong topic sentence outlines your whole paragraph.

Start with the premise and then add a reason

In your topic sentence, you should start with a claim and then provide a reason for your claim. These are the two basic components of a topic sentence. A stronger topic sentence is incomplete without these components. If you're in doubt, you can always ask an expert, "can you write my paper free?" if you are not able to write it.

Avoid any grammatical and structural mistakes

Informal language and word contractions can invalidate your topic sentences. You should always pay close attention to avoid any grammatical mistakes. A stronger topic sentence also has a perfect sentence structure. Therefore, avoid all such errors as your essay greatly depends on your topic sentences.

Review the topic sentences multiple times

Multiple reviews will help you to write the perfect topic sentences. Keep in mind, your paragraph structure depends on the perfection of topic sentences. Therefore, you must write strong topic sentences. You can be sure that following the outlined tips will surely help you in your quest to learn how to write strong topic sentences. If this activity becomes stressful for you, a professional essay writing service can also be hired to help you out in the situation. But don't give up and be sure to try it out, because practice makes perfect.
